Questions 11-15

For each question, choose the correct answer.

Lynn's Blog: India

I have just come back from an amazing day in New Delhi, the capital of India. I saw many places in the city and I took some incredible photos.

The most interesting place we went to was the National Gandhi Museum. I had heard the name Gandhi before, but I didn't know much about him until today.

At the museum, I learned that Gandhi was a very special person. He was a small and quiet man. He dressed in simple clothes and lived in a very simple house. He didn't look or behave like a great leader, but he changed the history of India. The Indian people loved and admired Gandhi so much that they gave him the name "Mahatma", which means "Great Soul".

Mahandas Karamchand Gandhi was born in India in 1869. When he was 19, he went to London to study law. Then he moved to South Africa, where he worked as a lawyer. In 1915, Gandhi returned to India. At the time, India was ruled by the British and the British often treated the Indians badly. Gandhi believed that his country should be free, but he didn't believe in using violence. So he organised peaceful demonstrations against the British.

In the end, Gandhi succeeded. The British left India and it became an independent country in 1947. Sadly, Gandhi was shot and killed in 1948 by a man who didn't agree with his beliefs.

The next time I have to write about a person I admire, I think I'll choose Gandhi!

Five sentences have been removed from the text below.

For each question, choose the correct answer.

There are three extra sentences which you do not need to use.

Going to Malawi

When I heard about the special expedition to Malawi, I knew I had to go. It was obviously a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. Participation was open to students from all the schools in our area, but the problem was that there were only 18 places. 16 However, I didn't let that stop me from trying. I had to write an essay about why I wanted to participate, and then I was invited for an interview. It was really intense, and I was asked difficult questions. 17 And I was right. A few days later, I was told I had a place!

The next thing I had to do was to find a way of paying for the trip. So many young people are trying to raise money to go on trips and expeditions these days, so it was important to come up with a good idea. One of my friends told me about a beginner's triathlon. You have to swim 400 metres, cycle 12 km and run 2.5 km. He said it as a joke because everyone knows I'm not good at sport. 18 So was everyone else. Nobody thought I could do it. But I did, and I raised £480!

Finally, we left for Malawi. I was so excited during the flight and couldn't wait to start working. We did a lot of work at schools. We painted buildings, did small building projects and worked in many school gardens. 19 Malawi is a poor country with a different culture. Women there do most of the hard work on the farms, and many families haven't got a lot of money or material possessions. 20 I knew it would be an incredible experience, and it certainly was. I can truly say that it has changed my life.

- A In addition, I also learned about the way of life there.
- B For this reason, Malawi is called the warm heart of Africa.
- C In spite of this, people there always seem to be happy.
- D All the same, I had a good feeling about it.
- E Teachers in schools in Malawi work very hard.
- F He was surprised when I took him seriously.
- G I didn't think I had a chance.
- H It wasn't easy and I thought about quitting.
